

Salonika Campaign Bibliography of relevant books

This bibliography has been compiled for the Salonika Campaign Society by Keith Roberts with help from other members of the SCS and of The Great War Forum and is shared without charge for anyone interested in the campaign.

The intention has been to limit the bibliography to printed books published in English, with links where possible to e-book versions. Articles in, for example, regimental journals have so far not been included, and general histories with only a few relevant pages will normally be excluded. A few exceptions will have slipped in, where the item covers potentially significant subjects that are not covered elsewhere. Many of the wide range of official histories especially those reording specialised activities will contain references to this campaign and if there are substantial chapters worthy of addition we will be happy to add the information in future versions of the bibliography.

We have listed the first published editions of books about the campaign and we realise that quite a number of the titles have been reprinted over time. Later editions are not normally listed as these can be found by using established book search websites such as viaLibri.net.

ISBN numbers are generally quoted only where the first edition of a book had one.

Keeping the bibliography up to date, and adding the books that we have missed

If you can help by adding further relevant titles please email scsbiblio@gmail.com giving as much information as possible, or use the contact form on the SCS website. There will be occasional updates to the bibliography, when there are a few items to add, so please don't expect an immediate update if, for example, you send us details of a single book.

If you share the bibliography with friends, please credit the Salonika Campaign Society and mention our website.

Aldridge, Olive M		The retreat from Serbia Through Montenegro and Albania	London: Minerva Publishing Company	1916		The author was a nurse in the Stobart hospital. In Serbia. https://archive.org/details/retreatfromserbi00aldriaia
Allen, Trevor		Jade Elephants	London: geoffrey Bles	1934		Fiction. The author served around Lake Doiran during the war, and created a murder mystery novel set there after the war. Not the greatest novel, but gives a vivid picture of his perception of the lives lived around Doiran.
Allen, Trevor		The Tracks they Trod: Salonika and The Balkans, Gallipoli, Egypt and Palestine Revisited.	London: Herbert Joseph	1932		Personal record of a Gallipoli veteran on a St. Barnabas' battlefield tour/pilgrimage, inc. visits to Mudros, Cape Helles, Anzac & Suvla Bays. It was only through organised tours like these that many grieving relatives were able to visit the countries of their loved ones' deaths & see their graves & memorials
Alport, A Cecil		The lighter Side of War	London: Hutchinson & Co. Ltd	1934		From the author's introduction: "It is a tale of the wide, open spaces rather than of trench warfare ; of the brighter side rather than of the tragedy of blood and mud on the Western Front. It tells of the marching of mounted men—which may appeal to veterans of the Boer War ; of the tramp of infantry through desert places. And of the manner of living in disease-stricken spots, such as the Monastir, the Struma, and the Vardar fronts in Macedonia. It describes the sports we indulged in ; our hopes and fears, and our reactions generally to the tragic business we call war. I hope a little sympathy will be felt for, and a modicum of interest taken in the less highly placed persons I have endeavoured to describe, for it is the Tommy, the N.C.O. and the junior officer who, in war, always get the worst of the deal, and seldom get either credit, or public recognition for what they have done".
Alport, A. Cecil		Malaria and its Treatment in the Line and at the Base	London: J. Bale, sons & Danielsson, Limited	1919		(Included SCS Trench Map DVD)
American National Red Cross		Reports of the American Red Cross Commissions upon their activities in Macedonia, Thrace, Bulgaria, the Aegean Islands and Greece. Armour, George Denholm		Bridle & Brush. Reminiscences of an Artist Sportsman	London: Eyre & Spottiswoode	1937		George Denholm Armour (1864-1949) is considered one of Britain's greatest sporting artists. Commissioned in the Remount Service, he commanded the Salonika Remount Depot. Contains some fine sketches.
Askew, Alice & Claude		The Stricken Land : Serbia as we saw it	London: Eveleigh Nash Company Limited	1916		In 1915, both Alice and Claude Askew, travelled to Serbia as part of a relief effort with a British field hospital that would be attached to the Second Serbian Army. They were also Special Correspondents for the British newspaper Daily Express. https://archive.org/details/strickenlandserb00aske/page/n7
Aslet, Clive		The Birdcage	London: Cumulus	2014		Fiction. "Clive Aslet beautifully captures this Alice-In- Wonderland town in a novel bursting with comedy and drama. Brave balloonists, fiendish spies, gypsies and a bevy of nurses – there is more than a hint of Blackadder. Written with a countryman's eye for ground, and for horses, the campaign is described in a laconic style reminiscent of the contemporary reporting. "
Babac, Dusan		The Serbian Army in The Great War 1914-1918	Solihull:Helion & Company	2016	978-1910777299

Burgess, Alan		The Lovely Sergeant	London: Heinemann	1963		Re Flora Sandes
Burr, Malcolm		Slouch Hat	London: George Allen & Unwin Ltd.	1935		Malcolm Burr was an Oxford scholar who travelled extensively in the Balkans before WW1. His knowledge of the Serbo-Croat and Greek languages led to his appointment as OC No. 1 Civil Labour Battalion. He provides an excellent account of life in the rear areas and the trials and tribulations of commanding local labourers.
Buxton, Noel M.P.	and Buxton, Charles Roden	The War and The Balkans	London: George Allen & Unwin	1915		https://archive.org/details/cu31924027827678
Buxton, Noel St.John	and Dudley, John Grey	Medical Notes from the Salonika Force	London	1916
Casey, Edward	Bourke, Joanna	"The misfit soldier" : Edward Casey's war story, 1914-1918	Cork: Cork University Press	1999		Edward Casey, an Irish Cockney from Canning Town, was no war hero. Yet his account of four years of war service with the Royal Dublin Fusiliers provides an interesting chronicle of personal insecurities, Irish unrest and military tourism. Possibly the same volume exists under this title" A War Story 1914-1932: A War Story, 1914-32 "
Casson, Stanley		Steady Drummer	London: G Bell & Sons	1935		An interesting memoir by a junior intelligence officer in the first world war (1914-1918) British army. In it he briefly describes fighting in France, the majority of the book concerns his intelligence work in Greece, Bulgaria and the Balkans. Kindle ebook + N&M reprint.
Chapman R. W.		The Portrail of a Scholar and other Essays written in Macedonia 1916-1918	Oxford.University Press	1920		Not apparently Great War related. Apparently first subject was Ingram Bywater an English classical scholar.

Collis, Maurice		Stanley Spencer ; a biography	London	1960		A biography including extracts from the artist's letters
Cooper, K	Cooper K and Davies J. E.	The Cardiff Pals	Cardiff: Militaria Cymraeg	1998		A slim volume that looks at the battalion's service in Salonika/the Balkans. It runs to 102 pages, the first 76 being an account of the battalion's "doings". They reach Salonika on page 27. Page 77+ is a roll of honour. It recounts the experience of the lads in bite-size chunks; I suspect that much of it has been compiled from brief snippets in the local press plus the odd letter, anecdote, memoir etc.
Corbett, Elsie		Red Cross in Serbia 1915-1919	Banbury: Cheney & Sons	1964		In May to August 1915 Elsie Corbett worked as a VAD in a Children's Fever Hospital at Vrnjatchka Banja. Corbett, along with other members of the unit, was captured by the Austrians and returned to England as a Red Cross prisoner of war in February, 1916. In August of that year she returned to Serbia, this time working with the Scottish Women's Hospitals Motor Ambulance Column at Ostrovo and was based at Yelak until her column was caught up in the Serbian advance back into their homeland.
Cowland, W. S.		Some Account of the 10th and 12th Battalions The Hampshire Regiment 1914-1918	Winchester: Warren	1930		78pp. Second half of book relates to service in Macedonia.

Dearmer, Mabel		Letters from a Field Hospital	London: Macmillan and Co	1915		A lifelong pacifist, Dearmer was initially indifferent to the events that led up to the First World War. After their two sons enlisted, her husband volunteered his services as chaplain to the British Red Cross, and Dearmer decided to accompany him. She contracted typhoid and pneumonia and died at Kragujevatz in 1915 while serving as a nursing orderly with the Stobart Serbian Unit. Her war experiences are recorded in her posthumously published Letters from a Field Hospital (1915). Mabel was not the only casualty in the family. Her younger son, Christopher, died of wounds in Gallipoli three months after her death. Her elder son, Geoffrey, a celebrated World War I poet, lived to be 103. https://archive.org/details/lettersfromfield00dear/page/n13
Don, Archibald	Edited by Sayle, Charles	A Memoir	John Murray	1918		A medical student at St Bartholomew's Hospital he served with the Red Cross in France before being commissioned in the 10th (Service) Battalion Black Watch. The Battalion was transferred to Salonika where Don died from malignant malaria on 11th September 1916, aged twenty-five. The memoir includes extracts from his war letters and journal but there is little of purely military interest. https://archive.org/stream/archibaldonmemo00saylala#mode/2up (Included SCS Trench map DVD)

Fried, Marvin Benjamin		Austro-Hungarian War Aims in the Balkans during World War I	London: Palgrave Macmillan	2014		Beyond their fateful decisions which ultimately led to the First World War, the Austro-Hungarian leaders played a vital role in continuing and expanding the conflict to feed their territorial ambitions. Using previously secret material, Fried examines the Monarchy's aggressive and expansionist war aims in the Balkans. The conquest and subjugation of Serbia was but a cornerstone of a wider Austro-Hungarian imperialist dream.

Hatton, S. F.		The Yarn of a Yeoman	London: Hutchinson & Co.			With the emphasis on the lighter side of military life, despite the grim nature of the fighting described, this memoir takes us into the world of a Middlesex Yeoman during the Great War. Originally intended as mounted Horse, the Yeomanry, after initial training in Egypt, were flung into the furnace of Gallipoli as humble infantrymen. The fierce fighting reduced the unit to a strength of less than fifty. Back in Egypt, to their joy, the Yeomanry got their horses and patrolled the Suez Canal until they were despatched to the Salonika front in northern Greece. Their final Great War campaign was Allenby's successful thrust across the Sinai into Palestine and Syria, and the Yeomanry's battle honours included Gaza, Philistia, Judea, Jerusalem, the Jordan, Megiddo and Damascus.

Napier, H. D.	Lt. Colonel the Honourable Henry Dundas Napier C.M.G.	The experiences of a military attache in the Balkans 1914-1915	London: Drane's	1924		British diplomacy in the Great War was focussed on detaching Germany and Austria from their smaller allies in the Balkans, thus isolating the Central powers. They succeeded in bribing, persuading or cajoling Rumania to join them in 1916 but the move proved disastrous when Rumania was swiftly crushed and forced to conclude a humiliating peace. Bulgaria, by contrast, under its wily monarch 'Foxy' King Ferdinand proved steadfast in its support for Germany and Austria, despite its traditional ethnic and religious links to Russia. This book is an account by Britain's military attaché in Bulgaria, Lt. Col. the Hon. H.D. Napier, of his efforts to coerce Bulgaria. It provides an interesting sidelight on the Great War and the Balkans in the early 20th century.

Rutter, O		The Song of Tiadatha	Salonika, B.S.F. library	1919		Based on Longfellow's Hiawatha, this classic epic poem of the Salonika campaign forms an account of an infantry subaltern's war in Macedonia. The central character, Tiadartha (Tired Arthur) is, in Rutter's own words, a sort of composite of my brother officers. He served with 7th Battalion the Wiltshire Regiment, taking part in the First Battle of Doiran, which is vividly described in his poem which originally appeared in serialised form during the campaign in the BSF newspaper, 'The Balkan News'. https://archive.org/details/songoftiadatha00rutttiala/page/n6/mode/2up (Included SCS Trench Map DVD).

Sciaky, Leon		Farewell to Salonica: City of the crossroads	Istanbul: isis	2000		Leon Sciaky describes his childhood before the First World War in a prosperous, loving Jewish family in Salonica. Under the Ottoman Empire, the city's diverse communities - Jews, Muslim Turks, Orthodox Greeks and Bulgarians - met, traded and lived alongside each other day-to-day in an atmosphere of tolerance. Farewell to Salonica offers a fascinating insight into a lost society in which an older tradition of mutual respect was finally overcome by the pressures of nationalism and war.

Subervielle, Pierre	edited Catherine Labaume-Howard	From the Western Front to Salonika: A French soldier writes home : letters of Pierre Subervielle 1914-1919	Helion and Company	2016	978 1911096283	The letters home of Pierre Subervielle are different in tone to most similar English language works; warm and vibrant, about his service on the on the Western Front, but also in often forgotten Salonika and with tanks. A 1914 volunteer, aged 17, as one of the few recruits capable of driving he served first a transport squadron in Flanders, then in a similar role Salonika until early 1917, before teaching tank driving and entering action in late 1918. On October 15th he was wounded, losing an eye, but gaining a Medal Militaire and the Croix de Guerre. In each of these postings he reveals much of interest in French soldier's view of war.
